LETTER FROM THE PUBLISHER

FOR DISNEY
CHANNEL
SUBSCRIBERS

Dear Disney Channel friends:

There's a lot going on at The Disney Channel.

We spent much of this past year talking to families all over the U.S. We discovered that both parents and kids want television programming that they can share.

In September, we started scheduling movies seven nights a week starting at the family-friendly time of 7:00 pm. We're the first network to provide family movies every night.

In the coming months, we'll announce new shows being developed exclusively for The Disney Channel. We want The Disney Channel to be a gathering place for you and your family—a place that is fun and stimulating and entertaining.

And part of this adventure will be an all new Disney Channel Magazine.

Everyone on the staff will be very busy creating this new magazine for you.

The December/January issue will be the last issue until our new magazine is unveiled. In the meantime, we will continue to publish a Program Guide with daily listings, which, if you request, we'd be happy to mail to you. Call us toll-free at 1-800-800-9709.

Complete Disney Channel listings continue to be available in most daily and weekly newspapers, Sunday newspaper TV supplements, and in cable guides and TV Guide. Plus, if you have access, complete programming information and daily listings are provided on our website (www.disneychannel.com). Visit us in cyberspace!

From all of us at The Disney Channel...Happy Holidays...

MEET THE WINNER OF OUR "GREAT STORIES" CONTEST

"I love contests," says 12-year-old Matthew Mehne of Aibonito, Puerto Rico, "that hope of winning something...what I really liked about this contest was that it was about talent."

The contest Matthew entered last May was The Disney Channel's "Create a Great Story" contest, promoted nationwide at Waldenbooks stores. Open to third, fourth, fifth and sixth graders, the contest required entrants to write an original story 1,000 to 1,250 words in length. Matthew's story was called "The Bug Hunt." His was just one of over 14,000 entries.

"It was about a talking spider who wanted to talk to human beings," Matthew explains. He sent the story off, and one day the phone rang. "My grandfather said, 'Matthew, it's Disney.'"

"I wasn't even thinking that I'd won the grand prize," Matthew says—but he had. As Grand Prize Winner, Matthew received a trip with his family to the Disney-MGM Studios at Walt Disney World, where he was introduced to Disney animators and learned about the art of animation.

Matthew's story has been turned into an animated short that will begin airing on The Disney Channel on December 14.

"That's the best prize of all," he says. "I'm really excited to see what it's like." We're thrilled, too! Congratulations, Matthew!

ART GARFUNKEL ACROSS AMERICA

We've arranged for the companion CD to the enchanting Disney Channel special to be exclusively available to Disney Channel subscribers before it's offered to the public. The CD features sixteen songs including the classics—"Homeward Bound," "Bridge Over Troubled Water," "The Sound of Silence," "Scarborough Fair"—and new material not available anywhere else.

The special Disney Channel price is $13.98 & $3.50 shipping and handling. (You'll save $2.00, save a trip to the store, and have the CD first!)

Just call (800) 805-0041 to order through the mail with Mastercard, Visa, American Express, & The Discover Card. Offer expires January 31st.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

The Disney Channel is the exclusive home for the world television premieres of these great Disney movies:

Coming in February:

TOM & HUCK Join Mark Twain's heroes for adventure on the big river.

March: MUPPET TREASURE ISLAND

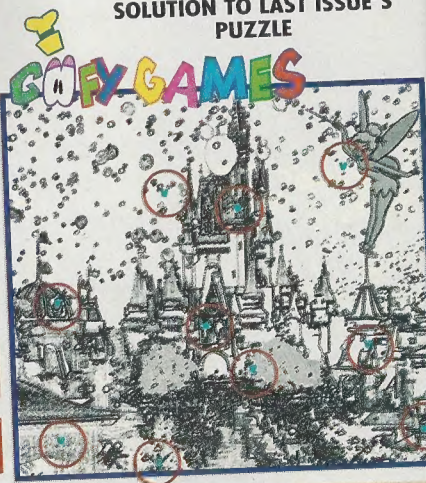

Kermit, Miss Piggy, and Tim Curry star in their version of the adventure saga.

April: JAMES AND THE GIANT PEACH

The classic all-family tale from the creators of Nightmare Before Christmas.

Holiday Time at the Happiest Place on Earth

IN TOWN SQUARE, A PICTURE PERFECT CHRISTMAS TREE soars 60 feet into the air. Carolers stroll down Main Street. And twice during the holiday season The Magic Kingdom holds its Christmas Candelight Ceremony, an evening of carols, candlelight, and a celebrity reading of the Christmas Story.

Welcome to holiday time at Disneyland. It is, in the words of John McClure, one "of the prettiest times of year at The Magic Kingdom." "It's an inspiring time when the holiday spirit is felt and shared by everyone in Disneyland," adds Darrel Dorr.

McClure and Dorr know of what they speak: McClure, a Disneyland set decorator, has seen 21 holiday seasons (this year marks his 22nd); Dorr is a show director for Disneyland's Candelight Christmas Ceremony.

A Perfect Christmas Tree

"We always get our tree from the same place," says John McClure, "from Mt. Shasta in Northern California. Actually, we get three trees—a 66-foot tree for Town Square and two thirty-foot trees for Cinderella's Castle."

This year, Disneyland's trees arrived on October 21, "along with 800 extra limbs," McClure adds. "We really like to shape our trees."

For the next month, the trees were kept backstage at Disneyland where they were prepared for installation.

"First we brace the tree along three sides of its trunk," McClure explains of the Town Square Tree, "to withstand Southern California's Santa Ana winds."

After the tree is braced, workers use the 800 extra limbs to give the tree its shape. Then the tree is painted, fire-proofed, and flocked. Next come lights: it takes six days to string some 1,600 lights. It takes another three days to decorate the tree with 500 ornaments.

Installation took place the Monday that begins Thanksgiving week. "At 1:00 a.m., when the park's closed, we bring the tree in on a crane. It fits into a special bunker that holds about six feet of trunk. If everything goes right, it takes about five hours."

Caroling Choirs

This year's Christmas Candelight Ceremony began "with a blind audition of over 100 choirs from across the country," says Darrel Dorr. "From that number, we selected 18 guest choirs to participate."

With the audition process completed by the beginning of October, "we had a meeting of all the choir directors and we went over this year's program," Dorr says. "After that, each choir practices on its own for two months. We then hold nine regional rehearsals."

The choirs all come together for Christmas in The Magic Kingdom. The guest choral groups are dressed in their regular robes. "We do arrange the groups so colors don't clash," Dorr says, "and everyone wears the same collar for their robes."

"Three hours before the ceremony, we have a rehearsal on the spot. It's the only combined rehearsal we hold."

The Ceremony always features a celebrity reading of the Christmas Story. "We've had the greats," Dorr says, "James Stewart, Gregory Peck, Charlton Heston. Last year we had David Ogden Stiers, who gave the event a special Disney feel."

Dorr was mum on this year's celebrity, but he was specific on one point: "Christmas in Disneyland," he says, "is always a magical thing."

OUR SPECIAL HOLIDAY SURVIVAL GUIDE

NO MATTER WHAT YOU'VE GOT PLANNED, one thing can absolutely ruin your holidays: Stress, that pervasive feeling that crops up just as the to-do lists lengthen while the days get shorter and shorter.

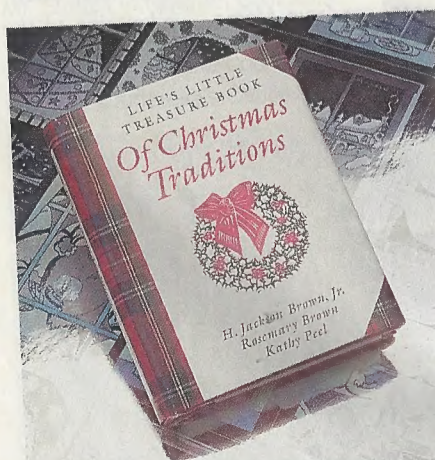

This issue of "Families" is devoted to helping your entire family minimize stress while making the most of the holiday season. First, turn to page 12 and take our holiday stress test to discover just how on-edge you really are.

Then learn how to help your children turn their holiday shopping excursions into fun—and into lessons in money management and values. Find out ways other families have taken their beloved childhood traditions and adapted them for today's lifestyles. And don't miss our five great ideas for last-minute gift-giving. (No matter how organized you are, you'll be bound to need them!)

From everyone at The Disney Channel Magazine, have a wonderful holiday season, full of fresh traditions and good times for all.

On page 14 you'll find five great ideas for last-minute gift-giving

Want quick ideas for starting some new holiday traditions of your own? Thumb through LIFE'S LITTLE TREASURE BOOK OF CHRISTMAS TRADITIONS by H. Jackson Brown Jr. (Rutledge Hill Press, $4.95).

HOLIDAY TRADITIONS, WITH A TWIST

With all the changes families face in the '90s—marriages, divorces, moves, the increasingly rapid pace of life itself—finding a way to recreate the best of the past and to invent meaningful new holiday traditions is important. But it's not always easy.

One Maryland family, after the father converted to Judaism, tossed out the plastic light-up Santa that had traditionally graced their front window, replacing it with a lighted wooden Menorah his father-in-law had crafted by hand.

Robin Olsen, of Chapel Hill, North Carolina, likes taking the Christmas-tree-decorating-fun she remembers from her own childhood and embellishing on the tradition. When she was a girl, decorating was done haphazardly, whenever a few free minutes were found during the season. Now she makes a day of it for her daughters, lighting a roaring fire and laying out all the ornaments so everyone can pick ones they especially like to hang. And because her husband is Scandinavian, Olsen has added many of his family traditions, such as keeping the tree up until January 6, the date of Epiphany.

Robin won't change some traditions because they are so sentimental to her. She serves almost exactly the same Christmas dinner as her mother always served with the precise dressing, cookies and fudge—but today she also serves a vegetarian roast, since her family now prefers that. For Robin Olsen, traditions reinforce the meaning of the holiday. "We try to live into what Christmas is," she says.

Valerie Nelson, of Oak Park, California, says she has made a concerted effort to

THE HOLIDAY STRESS TEST

Exhausted. Irritable. Frustrated. Somehow, the holidays don't always bring out the best in us. Some experts say many people are so committed to creating a perfect holiday—whatever that is—that they get completely unraveled in the process.

Stress researchers offer these questions to help you figure out whether you're stressed out or close to it:

- ☐ Are you having difficulty falling asleep or sleeping through the night?
- ☐ Are you having trouble concentrating or remembering things?
- ☐ Do you become tearful easily?
- ☐ Do you focus on one particular problem and have trouble getting it off your mind?
- ☐ Are you increasingly irritable with co-workers, children, spouse, or even commuter traffic?
- ☐ Is the pace of your activities very intense?
- ☐ Do you feel behind in almost everything you're involved with?
- ☐ Do you feel overwhelmed by the pace of your day?
- ☐ Have you lost control over how you get things done?
- ☐ Do you lack someone to talk to and confide in?

If you answered yes to three or more questions, it's time to slow down. Make a list of what needs to be done and cross out whatever is not absolutely necessary. Delegate chores to others, if you can. Try to sort out your situation with someone. Rather than trying to make the holidays perfect, consider what it would take to make them simple and relaxed. A big part of dealing with stress is figuring out what can be fixed—and what can't.

cultivate memories for her children. "Part of the payoff is just overhearing them describe the traditions to their friends, proudly saying something like 'At my house we always open one present on Christmas Eve.'"

Sometimes traditions have nothing to do with gifts, decorating or eating. Nelson has made a point to take the family to see a production of The Nutcracker every year, and the family routinely meets an aunt and uncle on a one-night getaway sometime before New Year's Eve.

"It's not always easy to blend traditions between families, and sometimes it's the details that are troublesome," Nelson says. If one spouse always opened presents on Christmas Eve, and the other is committed to opening presents at 6 a.m. on Christmas morning, resolution can demand high-level negotiations. For Nelson, the argument was whether the gifts should be gathered under the tree or near the stockings; she and her husband Steve compromised, creating a new tradition of their own.

For Nelson, an activity becomes an official family tradition once it has been done twice. Some years she'll try something new and if it isn't received enthusiastically, it's dropped.

What do these traditions mean to and do for kids? "I think it gives them warm fuzzies and a sense of specialness," Nelson says, "a mini-culture they share solely with their family."

HELPING KIDS BUY GIFTS

Part of the real meaning behind the holidays is lost on children as they make out infinite wish lists and gear up expectantly for the gifts and toys. At some point, parents realize their children might benefit from participating in the gift exchange—even learning how to plan and shop for presents within a budget.

Children love taking their crumpled-up dollar bills to shop for special presents for family and friends. How old should children be for such activities to be meaningful? How do you guide them? Where do you take them? And what are you trying to teach them, after all?

Kyle Bown, director of marketing for Finity Corporation, a personal finance firm in Salt Lake City, Utah, says research shows that children are ready for gift buying at about age 4 or 5, when they are curious about money and able to learn basic management and planning. "I'm amazed at their interest level," Brown says. "You sit down with them and say, 'This is a dollar. What would you like to do with it?'"

Catherine Williams, president of the Consumer Credit Counseling Service of Greater Chicago, says she thinks parents should first talk with their children about their family's philosophy of gift buying. "Tell them it's important that a gift truly comes from the heart. Help them learn that gifts can't buy happiness or forgiveness, but that they are a way to convey thoughtfulness."

Ideally, gift buying starts with goal setting weeks or months before the holidays, says Bown. In his household, the whole family makes a list, identifying all the people for whom they'd like to buy gifts. Then they come up with ideas for each person and estimates of what the items will cost. With children, the same process can happen with their own gift lists, so they can determine how much money they will need before they venture out on a shopping trip.

Williams advocates first taking children on a shopping excursion that is geared to scoping out what's available and getting ideas. After talking and thinking over the options, make a second trip with specific gifts in mind. It's less stressful and it reduces the risk of last minute arguments about whether a given gift is a good idea.

Williams advocates encouraging children to buy everyone on their gift list a similar item, individualized for their particular interests and hobbies. For instance, a child could get everyone a coffee mug, or a calendar, each geared to the person's personality. "It helps the children focus, it's manageable, and it limits the shopping to one area of a store."

Williams also encourages families to consider looking in unique places for gifts, like the hardware or stationery store. One year her 12-year-old daughter gave people bags of flower bulbs, wrapped creatively; another year she gave mechanical pencils to her friends.

Children can also come up with gift ideas that don't involve shopping: they can make coupons by hand or on the computer for services—"Take out the trash" or "Babysit for four hours free"—or can bake cookies or make crafts. Some children paint pictures for everyone on their gift list, or write poems or stories.

Whether a gift is bought or made, Williams recommends that parents help the children plan for all the gift-related costs—wrapping paper, sales tax, and baking supplies—so they learn how to estimate the expense of a present.

Despite careful planning, children are prone to run short at the cash register. What do you do when the child looks at you in panic and needs $5 more for the gift? Williams suggests making up the shortfall with an I.O.U. "Be sure to collect the money owed later; that's their first introduction to a credit relationship."

Bown and Williams say these early lessons instill a healthy lifelong attitude to managing money. But Bown warns parents that they should consider their own gift-buying habits during the holidays first: "What message are you sending the children with your own example?"

GREAT LAST MINUTE GIFTS

IT DOESN'T MATTER HOW well-organized you are—inevitably you'll need a last-minute present. Some professional shoppers recommend keeping a linen closet stocked with classic gifts that can be given to almost anyone. Here are a few ideas, geared to the young and the young at heart:

1) TO-DO KITS: Children love creating things. Try THE MAKE-YOUR-OWN-BUTTON BOOK by Andrea Wayne-Von Kongigslow and Linda Grandfield (Hyperion Books for Children, $12.95); MAKE YOUR OWN CALENDAR 1997, (Little, Brown & Company, $6.95); or CREATE-A-BOOK KIT (Print Paks, $24.99), a multimedia craft package on CD-ROM that lets you make three 12-page books, with photos and fabulous covers.

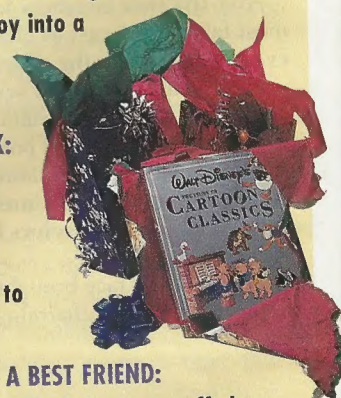

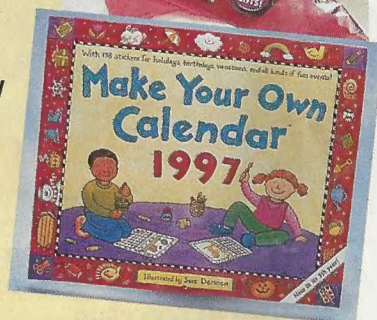

2) PUZZLES: Here's one for pre-schoolers—a 36-piece rendition of GOOD NIGHT GORILLA (Mudpuppy Press, $12.95), taken from the book about a zookeeper who doesn't realize that the gorilla has stolen his keys and is leading a parade of animals home to spend the night.

3) ACTIVITY BOOKS: A book devoted to that classic American drawing toy, THE ETCH A SKETCH BOOK (Klutz Press, $16.95), comes with a small version of the toy attached. Included are 12 color vinyl overlays that cling to the screen, transforming the toy into a game board or maze.

4) A GREAT FAMILY BOOK:

Here's something the whole family can enjoy: WALT DISNEY'S TREASURY OF CARTOON CLASSICS (Disney Press, $29.95). It's a collection of Walt Disney's early cartoon shorts, from 'Twas the Night Before Christmas to The Ugly Duckling.

5) A BEST FRIEND:

Everybody loves a stuffed animal, especially a family pet that doesn't bark. Pick one from FAO Schwarz, $28. Or go for a classic toy: the SLINKY DOG (from Toy Story), $14.99, also from FAO Schwarz.

AT OUR HOUSE

Observations on our schedule by Jude Schneider, a Disney Channel programming executive and the mom of Jake and Eli.

FAREWELL TO THE KINGS December 8th marks a milestone for us here at The Disney Channel with the premiere of the final episode of AVONLEA. "So Dear to My Heart" wraps up seven years—and believe it or not 91 episodes—of Avonlea. And yes, there will be a three-hanky ending. Having spent two-and-a-half years as a supervising executive on the show, I find this a bittersweet moment. But by now the real kids on the show have grown up and out: Gema Zamprogna (Felicity) has gone off to college; Sarah Polley is continuing her acting career while becoming involved in politics in Toronto; and Zach Bennett (Felix) has become quite a contemporary young man. Besides, we have come to the year 1914 in our fictional township of Avonlea and World War I looms; the charming and idyllic innocence of that pre-war world is about to vanish. Thus life in the real world and in the fictional world have conspired to take us away from our little village. But wasn't it a wonderful visit? (Of course, we are running the entire Avonlea saga at 10:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday—tape the episodes you missed or the episodes you love!)

NIGHTJOHN If you missed the premiere of this original Disney Channel movie last spring, I urge you to sit down with your older kids for an encore performance on Martin Luther King Day (January 20). If the movie prompts a further discussion of slave life, you might want to take a look at slave narratives, which were used by Gary Paulsen, author of the original novella, and screenwriter Bill Cain. One excellent compilation of narratives is Bullwhip Days (Avon Books), available at bookstores and libraries nationwide.

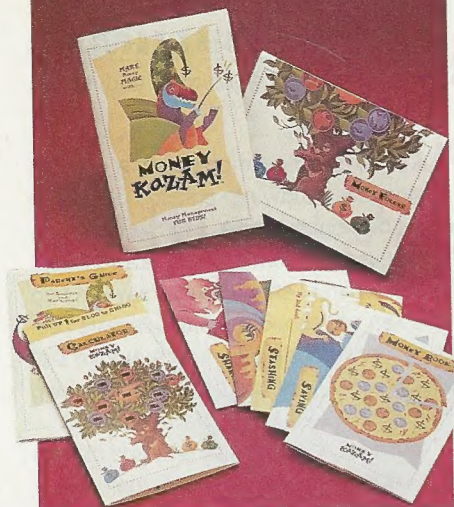

SEND THEM TO THE LIBRARY As an interesting exercise, challenge your kids to compare the original book with the movie version airing on The Disney Channel:

- A CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT* by Mark Twain (grade 6 and up);
- THE JUNGLE BOOK* by Rudyard Kipling (grade 6 and up);
- OLD YELLER* by Fred Gipson (who also co-wrote the screenplay; grades 4–7);
- THE HOBBIT* by J.R.R. Tolkien (grade 6 and up);
- LITTLE HOUSE ON THE PRAIRIE* by Laura Ingalls Wilder (grades 3–7).

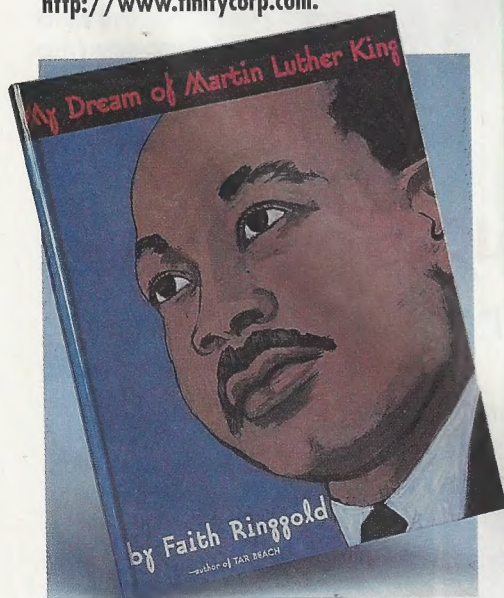

AROUND THE MOUSE "Not everyone can be a star but we can all make a difference": On December 14 we'll present the premiere of THE AMERICAN TEACHER AWARDS. Look for inspiring profiles of excellent teachers. If the show makes you think of a dedicated teacher who should be recognized, write us at The Walt Disney Company and McDonald's Present The American Teacher Awards, PO Box 9805, Calabasas, CA 91372, for information on how to nominate a teacher. "And now for some star power": Don't miss the live-action, star-turn versions of PETER PAN (with Mary Martin) and PINOCCHIO (with Danny Kaye) in January. Hey hey it's The Monkees...Where would we be today without The Monkees? I don't know about you, but I'll be groovin' to HEY, HEY WE'RE THE MONKEES on January 22nd.

Happy Holidays!

Jude

How can money management be taught all year long? MONEY KAZAM! (Finity Corporation, $12.98) is a kit that includes a book for kids, a parent's guide, and folders and envelopes to make saving easier. It's designed to teach financial independence through systems children can understand. For more information, call (800) 752-6637, or write Finity Corporation, P.O. Box 510601, Salt Lake City, UT 84151-9913; for Internet access: <http://www.finitycorp.com>.

DREAM CATCHERS

CELEBRATE Martin Luther King's birthday (January 20) with a creative book for all ages, MY DREAM OF MARTIN LUTHER KING by Faith Ringgold (Crown Publishers Inc., $17.00). Illustrated with dramatic, folk-modern paintings, this book captures the scope of Martin Luther King's vision.

Being young is one thing being

A Massive

Meet

Ben Foster and Jewel Staite

Becca Fisher and Tucker James are life-long friends: they have the same birthday; they were raised next door to one another, sharing birthday parties, backyard swings and baby-sitters. But when they hit the teen years, they find themselves coping with a landslide of changes that occur within and around them.

Welcome to Flash Forward, a new Disney Channel series. (Flash Forward enjoyed a nationwide sneak peek as part of the ABC Saturday morning lineup and joins The Disney Channel with a special New Year's Day 10-episode marathon, which starts at 7:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time). The series then moves to its regular time slot on Saturday and Sunday, beginning January 5.) Flash Forward is a very real yet light-hearted look at the teen years. In fact, some situations can be so real that adults who watch Flash Forward might just experience a flash back.

"It's what everybody goes through," says Jewel Staite, who is 14 and plays Becca. "You have fights with friends and you realize people aren't who they say they are. Everybody is maturing, but they're all maturing at a different time."

Ben Foster, who is 16 and plays Tucker, adds, "I think the emotions in the show ring true for everyone. Everyone has felt pain and embarrassment and laughter."

When Ben went into acting at age eight, he went into it with goals. According to Gillian Foster, her son had been chomping at the bit to pursue a professional acting career before she and her husband, Steven, finally gave in.

"His desire to act began as early as age 4. He was convinced that he should have his own television show. And I thought, 'Oh, cute! All children would like that—and over my dead body!' I did everything in my power to dissuade him. But, no. It's just his passion."

Since then, Ben has primarily performed in theater. His first starring role came at age 11, as Charlie Brown in You're a Good Man Charlie Brown, young and the stars of your own television series is another.

Desire To Achieve

produced by the Iowa Theater company. He's also written, directed, and starred in a one-act play, which won first place in Iowa's "Odyssey of the Mind" competition. At the Interlochen Theater Arts Summer program, he won the Best Actor Award two years in a row.

"I didn't find the change from theater to film and television difficult," Ben observes. "It's just playing to a different audience. With theater, you're playing to the audience. With film, you're playing to just one person, and that person is the camera."

"I think the emotions

true for everyone,"

says Ben Foster.

"Everyone has

While Ben Foster knew what he wanted, Jewel Staite knew what she didn't want—modeling.

"I started out modeling and I really didn't like it," Jewel says. "It was like a bunch of pretty girls walking down a runway and getting told when to turn and what to do and what clothes to wear and how to look pretty. Glamour first. Put your chin up. It was stupid. So I took an acting course and got an agent."

That was seven years ago. Since then, Jewel has appeared on numerous television series and movies of the week, including The X-Files, Are You Afraid of the Dark?, Spacecases, Liar, Liar, and ABC's Posing and The Only Way Out.

Being the stars of Flash Forward does have some drawbacks: Ben and Jewel work long hours, five days a week; they squeeze in school studies between takes; they moved away from friends—and in Jewel's case, even her family. While she and her mother are in Toronto, her father, Bob Staite, stays back home in Vancouver.

Jewel's mom Cher says, "It just sort of becomes your life. Right now, we're living Flash Forward. You get to the studio early in the morning and you don't leave until late afternoon. Then you still have to get out of wardrobe and out of the parking lot. By the time you get home, there's just time to make a few phone calls, read scripts, do some homework, and go to bed. You've got to love it."

Gillian Foster adds, "Ben's career has affected us, but it's critical for his fulfillment. He couldn't wait anymore. It wouldn't have been good for him to have waited any longer. So, we'll go wherever he takes us and do what we have to do."

"Sometimes I get tired," Jewel admits. "But it's so much fun that it doesn't really

Last year at The American Teacher Awards, 35 of Rich Ruffalo's colleagues chose him as "The Outstanding Teacher of 1995." Now as the year comes to an end, Ruffalo is going Hollywood—a screenwriter is turning this inspiring teacher's life story into a TV movie.

RAYMOND SINGER HAS DONE A LOT IN HIS LIFE.

For years he was a regular on primetime TV. Singer has acted in and directed plays, both off-Broadway and on. Then, five years ago, he and his wife, Eugenia Botswick-Singer, decided to become full-time writers. As such, they have scripted countless movies for television and film. So when the duo got the call asking them to write a primetime TV movie about an inspiring teacher, Ray Singer remembers thinking, "Piece o' cake."

"Here's what I knew going into this," Ray says. "Every year The Walt Disney Company and McDonald's recognize outstanding teachers from around the country. After a rigorous selection process, they bring 36 top honorees together for a week in late Fall and give them a chance to get to know one another. The week culminates in The American Teacher Awards, broadcast on The Disney Channel, where the top honoree in each of 12 fields is recognized. From these twelve, one is chosen to be the Outstanding Teacher of the Year. And that's who Eugenia and I were assigned to write about—the Outstanding Teacher of 1995."

"I knew this guy had been chosen as Outstanding Athletic Coach and then Outstanding Teacher of the

LEGACIES OF THE H E A

Year. I knew he taught at a high school in Belleville, New Jersey. And I knew that he was blind. But nothing prepared me for the force of nature called Rich Ruffalo.

"I got to his house in New Jersey, and Rich answered the door. He's big—he still competes in worldwide competitions in weight lifting, javelin and discus. He's got a streetwise way of talking and a kind of gruff demeanor. But the most striking thing about him are his eyes. There is such clarity, purity, and honesty in those eyes, it is jarring. You have to remind yourself that he's blind.

"So I'm standing in his living room and Rich's six-year-old daughter walks in and asks him to help her do up the buttons on her dress, which he does. Then he says to her, 'Honey, you're wearing your blue dress. I love your blue dress. You look so pretty in it. Doesn't she look pretty, Ray?' And I think to myself, this is one heck of an assignment."

For the next several days, Ray followed Rich everywhere. "When he walks down the hall, he jangles his keys and the kids part to let him through like the Red Sea. As he passes, they are all yelling out, 'Hey, Mr. Ruff.' And, incredible as it seems, he knows every student by voice and can name them all.

"He's a kibbitzer with a great sense of humor. He's always joking around with everyone. The kids, especially, are drawn to him. I saw students who'd just met him, crying and pouring out their life story within the first 10 minutes of knowing him. I think they feel he's overcome so much adversity in his own life, that he can empathize with their pain."

Rich Ruffalo would tell you that this is, indeed, the key to his success as a teacher. "When I tell the kids, 'If I can succeed with my eyes closed, you can certainly do it with your eyes open,' they know I'm telling it like it is. They all know my story. I wasn't born blind. It's something I've had to deal with."

Rich first realized something was wrong when he was in college. "It started out with simple things. I was having trouble seeing colors. My night vision was going. Taking notes became harder and harder.

"In those days, hardly anyone was familiar with the condition I was finally diagnosed with, RP, or Retinitis Pigmentosa. I was 24 by the time they figured out what was wrong with my eyes. That was in 1976. By 1982, I had read my last book. By 1983, I was stone-cold-blind."

During those years, Rich managed to get his BA and his master's in biology and education, and his principal's credential. But although he was racking up the degrees, he felt his life was coming to an end.

"By the time I completely lost my sight I was already teaching biology and coaching track at Belleville High School, in Belleville, New Jersey. My first response to being blind was denial and deep depression. I could not imagine what I could possibly contribute so I handed in my resignation

AMERICAN TEACHER AWARDS

THE WALT DISNEY COMPANY AND MCDONALD'S PRESENT THE 1996 AMERICAN TEACHER AWARDS

On December 14 at 7:00 p.m. (6c), The Walt Disney Company and McDonald's Present the American Teacher Awards. A star-studded roster of celebrity presenters will pay tribute to 36 outstanding educators. Over the course of two and one-half hours you'll meet all 36 of these teachers through video profiles. From them will be selected an outstanding teacher in 12 different areas of instruction. All 36 honorees will then select the "Outstanding Teacher of 1996." During the program, a special guest will also present "The Frank G. Wells Award," which is given to a non-teacher "whose life of civility, compassion, integrity, and humility provides a compass for human behaviour." This year's recipient of the Frank G. Wells Award comes from the world of sports: Baltimore Oriole Cal Ripken Jr. Join us December 14 for a memorable and moving night.

tion. But if I couldn't see, there was still a power watching out for me. My then-principal, now supervisor, Michael Lally, refused my resignation. Instead, he gave me a full time proctor who could read and correct papers so I could continue to teach.

"I figured the only sane response to Michael's challenge was to take serious stock of myself. So I took an inventory of my strengths and weaknesses, and decided to take life on. Soon after that, I met my wife. I was just a regular schmo, and a blind one at that, but she loved me anyway.

"Once I had someone to love, I had all the motivation I needed. I've been in hyperdrive ever since. It is crucial to me that both my wife and daughter never, ever say, 'We missed out on that because he's blind.' I want them to be proud of me. I want to leave a legacy in their hearts."

"That should be no problem," says Ray Singer. "This guy's enthusiasm is boundless. His claim to fame is his ability to motivate. He gets these kids to believe in themselves and to understand that learning is a skill they can develop that will enhance everything about their lives."

Rich admits his classroom technique is highly traditional. He follows the book—he's memorized it—and runs a very tight ship. "But," says Rich, "if all I do is show up and teach biology and I'm blind, I'm teaching these kids something about hope."

Ray Singer would also say Rich teaches his students something about love. "Rich is completely crazy about his little girl. So he's developed this technique with his students where he puts her face on each one of them. That way he's always talking to someone he loves."

matter. I know not everyone would want this lifestyle. But I want to have an amazing career and totally live and watch myself blossom and watch other people enjoy my work."

Ben shares Jewel's drive. "I have a desire to achieve. Massive. I guess it's in my blood. You could call me a compulsive perfectionist. I'm always working."

Both Jewel and Ben describe their own off-camera relationship as resembling their character's brother/sister-like relationship.

"Ben and I are so close. Totally. Our friendship is basically the same as Becca and Tucker's, except ours is more mature. Our characters really neglect each other sometimes, which is sad. I guess you could say our real-life friendship is at a level that Tucker and Becca's friendship would reach in a couple of years."

"Jewel and I are tight," Ben says. "We're different from our characters, but I guess the relationship shows on-screen. It's just a huge amount of comfort, where you can say anything, act like a total jerk, and still be able to come back and be accepted. As one of my friends said, certain people are like a security blanket or a big sweater. When you're in a bad situation, you can go to that person and feel all cozy."

Walt Disney's Cinderella

HOW WALT DISNEY RISKED THE FUTURE OF HIS STUDIO ON A SINGLE MOVIE

HIS POSTWAR FEATURES HAD FARED POORLY at the box-office; he was in dire financial straits; and Walt Disney was literally staking the future of his studio on one toss of the dice—his new animated movie, Cinderella. The film had to be a success if the studio was to survive. But animation, as experience had shown Walt, could prove a costly, time-consuming business. To insure that every scene and piece of business in Cinderella worked, Walt shot a live-action version of the film before a single piece of animation had begun. "Walt decided, 'We've got to do something here that we can do for a price, and we've got to know what we're doing all the way through it, so that we don't have to make a lot of changes,'" recalls Ollie Johnston, one of Walt's celebrated "nine old men" of Disney animation. "Walt talked about how the studio was always hanging on one picture," Johnston says. "I know that's why he turned to this method for Cinderella: he had no choice." Walt's desperate innovation worked: Cinderella became a box-office triumph and was deemed an artistic success. The future of Walt's studio was secure—at least for the moment...

CINDERELLA AIRS ON THE DISNEY CHANNEL IN JANUARY, BEGINNING JANUARY 12 AT 7:00 P.M. (6:00 CENTRAL)

"Weird Al Yankovic"

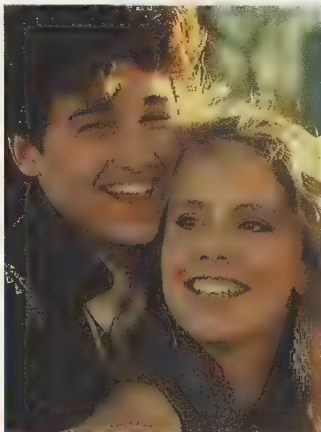

WARNING! MUSICAL PARODIST AT WORK!!!

IF YOU LOVE ROCK AND ROLL OR RAP, MUSIC will never be the same again after you've seen the world premiere of "Weird Al" Yankovic: There's No Going Home. "Weird Al" has always practiced his own unique form of comedy—a mixture, excuse the seeming oxymoron, of the sophisticated and the sophomoric. But in the past few years "Weird Al" has found a whole new audience: teenagers, particularly boys, who love his musical parodies and his wild concerts. So here is "Weird Al" in his own version of The Disney Channel's "Going Home" music specials. In "Weird Al's" hands, Madonna's hit "Like a Virgin" becomes "Like a Surgeon"; Kurt Cobain's "Smells Like Teen Spirit" becomes "Smells Like Nirvana"; and gangsta rap will never be the same as "Weird Al" transforms "Gangsta's Paradise" into "Amish Paradise." Truly, this performance must be seen to be believed—and appreciated. Of course, "Weird Al" just doesn't deform the music of others (though what he does to the Red Hot Chili Peppers is pretty funny). Oh no, in "Weird Al" Yankovic: There's No Going Home, he performs his own songs "Since You've Been Gone" and "One More Minute."

PLAYING SOCCER—MOVIE STYLE

IN THE BIG GREEN, A BRITISH SCHOOL TEACHER revitalizes a small Texas town by organizing a soccer team. When it came time to shoot the film—on location in Texas—writer/director Holly Goldberg Sloan faced a small dilemma. Despite the game's popularity today—is there a parent who doesn't have a child playing soccer on a fall Saturday morning?—the film's young stars needed coaching to become convincing soccer players. Enter Robert Parr, coach of the University of Texas' varsity team. "Except for a couple of proficient players, the rest had zero experience," Parr remembers. The result was soccer camp—but soccer in the movies isn't like real soccer contested on the playing field. "We just couldn't spend time on team tactics," Parr says, "so we had to concentrate on individual techniques—how to trap the ball, how to control direction, how to dribble. We emphasized keeping the ball on the ground because that's a nicer style of soccer to watch." Even the adult co-stars got in the act, as Steve Guttenberg and Olivia d'Abo attended camp. Steve Guttenberg's familiarity with soccer was limited to watching the recent World Cup competition. British-born Olivia d'Abo, on the other hand, regularly roots for Manchester United, one of Britain's top teams. "I think it's one of the most beautiful sports to watch," d'Abo says. "It's very graceful and incredibly athletic and you really use your body."

Blast Back To The Past

HEY, HEY WE'RE THE MONKEES—A RETROSPECTIVE OF CLASSIC '60s TV

YES KIDS, THIS MOMENT OF '60s "KULCHUR" REALLY HAPPENED: The Monkees met The Beatles. On the one hand you had a faux-rock group—a television invention—meeting The Fab Four, creators of a musical revolution. "We liked one another," Davy Jones recalls. "John Lennon called us the Marx Brothers of rock 'n' roll." This is just one of the scenes from Hey, Hey We're The Monkees, the first retrospective to feature all four Monkees (Davy Jones, Mickey Dolenz, Peter Tork, Michael Nesmith). "The Monkees was a surreal comedy that pushed the envelope," adds Mickey Dolenz. "But it also reflected things that happened to us." Hey Hey We're the Monkees follows The Monkees' television "experience" from the first cattle call to cast the show to its cancellation after three seasons on network television, interweaving '60s footage with reminiscences. (Reality notes: Davy Jones had played "The Artful Dodger" in the Broadway production of Oliver; Michael Nesmith was an accomplished guitarist who played with Stephen Stills; yes, they lip-synched.) It's a unique look at the '60s, and the special includes footage of Head, the movie that the boys still think put a finis to their careers. Created by now-noted director Bob Rafelson and a then-little-known actor/writer named Jack Nicholson, the scenes from Head paint a perfect portrait of '60s psychedelic style. Yes, despite rumors to the contrary, the '60s really happened. What will your kids say?

ERNEST P. WORRELL MEETS SANTA CLAUS

EBENEZER SCROOGE WOULD BE DELIGHTED: just as Santa decides it's time to hang up his red suit and put the reindeers out to pasture at age 151, he finds the perfect person to take his place. But when Santa encounters a sad-sack, rubber-faced taxi driver, his plans get turned topsy-turvy. Yes, Santa has collided with Ernest P. Worrell as Ernest Saves Christmas. "Ernest is popular because everybody knows someone like him," says Jim Varney, the comedian who has ridden the character of Ernest from his days as a television pitchman to his celebrity as a movie star. "Ernest might initially come across as obnoxious," says producer Don Cherry (who actually conceived of the character of Ernest P. Worrell), "but Jim Varney communicates the character's loveability and vulnerability as well. What we do is put Ernest in a situation where he's the outside element who gets flattened every time he gets involved."

Disney 101 DALMATIANS

No two snowflakes are exactly alike...and neither are any two spots on all 101 Dalmatians! This unique snowglobe stars an avalanche of adorable spotted pups everyone is barking about!

The playful Dalmatian scene is delightfully portrayed in this cute and collectible snowglobe. Above, the glass globe is filled with glittery snow; below the scene is masterfully cast in resin to capture every mischievous detail! The entire snowglobe is painted completely by hand (just like the thousands of spots in the original film!) and plays "Cruella De Vil" with a twist of the knob.

Don't miss this opportunity to add to your collection, or start one today! Payable in two convenient installments of $27.50 each, this snowglobe is destined to become a collector's item. So, fetch yours today!

Sleep Better On Air!

"After 15 years of sleepless nights and waking up to back pain, we both can finally say AHHH in the morning and smile."

—Marc P.,
Brooklyn, NY

Frustrated With Your Sleep?

Do you toss and turn at night? Can't seem to find a comfortable position? Does your back ache when you awake? These are signs that your mattress may not be supporting you properly.

Makes Metal Coils OBSOLETE!

Patented Air Chamber Design!

You Control the Firmness!

With a SELECT COMFORT® sleep system, you can change the firmness depending on how your body feels each night. Go from extra-firm to extra-soft, simply at the touch of a button. In fact, the firmness adjusts independently on each side of the bed so you and your sleeping partner can get custom support without compromising comfort or quality of sleep.

The Mattress With Easy Push Button Firmness Control!

SELECT COMFORT® sleep systems comfortably contour to your body, properly support your back and spine, and reduce pressure points.

Metal coil mattresses can create uncomfortable pressure points and provide uneven support over time.
